

You won't see yourself on amphetamines
but everyone else will.

Matt's friends and family noticed, of course they did. When they tried to say something he denied having a problem. When he started stealing off them to pay his drug debt, they stopped trying.

Matt's housemate came home one day and found him dead on the floor. You'd never think that in less than 12 months amphetamines could turn a good mate into a bad memory, but they can.

On average there are 74 amphetamine-related deaths in Australia each year.

Read more about Matt's story
drugaware.com.au

